Chancellor on brink of second bailout for banks

Billions may be needed as lending squeeze tightens

Francis Elliott Deputy Political Editor
Gary Duncan Economics Editor

Alistair Darling has been forced to consider a second bailout for banks as the lending drought worsens.

The Chancellor will decide within weeks whether to pump billions more into the economy as evidence mounts that the £37billion part-nationalisation last year has failed to keep credit flowing. Options include cash injections, offering banks cheaper state guarantees to raise money privately or buying up "toxic assets", The Times has learnt.

The Bank of England revealed yesterday that, despite intense pressure, the banks curbed lending in the final quarter of last year and plan even tighter restrictions in the coming months. Its findings will alarm the Treasury.

The Bank is expected to take yet more aggressive action this week by cutting the base rate from its current level of 2 per cent. Doing so would reduce the cost of borrowing but have little effect on the availability of loans.

Whitehall sources said that ministers planned to "keep the banks on the boil" but accepted that they need more help to restore lending levels. Formally, the Treasury plans to focus on state-backed guarantees to encourage private finance, but a number of interventions are on the table, including further injections of taxpayers' cash.

Under one option, a "bad bank" would be created to dispose of bad debts. The Treasury would take bad loans off the hands of troubled banks, perhaps swapping them for government bonds. The toxic assets, blamed for poisoning the financial system, would be parked in a state vehicle or "bad bank" that would manage them and attempt to dispose of them while "detoxifying" the mainstream banking system.

The idea would mirror the initial proposal by Henry Paulson, the US Treasury Secretary, to underpin the American banking system by buying

Hi ChatGPT

Hello! How can I assist you today?

What do you think of a TIME cover story with the title, "The AI Arms Race Is Changing Everything?"

As an AI language model, I don't have personal opinions or beliefs, but I can provide some context and information on the subject.

"The AI Arms Race is Changing Everything" could be an attention-grabbing and thought-provoking title for a cover story on AI. A cover story in a widely-read publication like TIME could help raise public awareness about the potential risks and benefits of this trend, and stimulate discussions on how to ensure that AI is developed and deployed in a responsible and ethical manner.

It's important to note that the title of the story could also be interpreted as sensationalist or alarmist, and may not accurately reflect the complexities ■

Le « Deep learning », une révolution en Intelligence artificielle

Yann LECUN, chercheur et directeur du laboratoire de recherche en intelligence artificielle de Facebook, est nommé professeur invité sur la Chaire Informatique et sciences numériques

Une chaire créée en partenariat avec Inria

- Leçon Inaugurale le 04 février 2016 à 18h00 -

Fidèle à sa mission d'être toujours à la pointe des nouveaux développements et avancées scientifiques, le Collège de France a créé, il y a six ans en partenariat avec Inria, une chaire annuelle *Informatique et sciences numériques*¹. Chaque année s'y succèdent les plus grands chercheurs de domaines qui bouleversent nos quotidiens mais également le monde de la recherche et l'ensemble des sciences. Cette année, c'est Yann LeCun, l'un des plus éminents chercheurs en Intelligence artificielle, professeur à l'université de New York et directeur du laboratoire de recherche en intelligence artificielle de Facebook (FAIR), qui occupera cette chaire avec un cycle d'enseignement ouvert à tous.

Yann LeCun, spécialiste de l'apprentissage automatique des machines (« machine learning »), est l'un des pères du « Deep Learning » (« apprentissage profond »)²; une méthode à laquelle il se consacre depuis 30 ans. Le Deep Learning, c'est le principe qu'il rencontre au départ dans la communauté scientifique. Le Deep Learning, qui fait appel à la fois aux connaissances en neurosciences, aux mathématiques et aux progrès technologiques, est aujourd'hui plébiscité comme une véritable révolution dans le domaine de l'intelligence artificielle. Il a déjà permis d'immenses progrès et de multiples applications dans les domaines de la reconnaissance faciale et vocale, de l'étiquetage d'images, du traitement automatisé du langage ou encore de la vision par ordinateur.

« Les cerveaux humain et animal sont « profonds », dans le sens où chaque action est le résultat d'une longue chaîne de communications synaptiques (de nombreuses couches de traitement). Nous recherchons des algorithmes d'apprentissage correspondants à ces « architectures profondes ». Nous pensons que comprendre l'apprentissage profond ne nous servira pas uniquement à construire des machines plus intelligentes, mais nous aidera également à mieux comprendre l'intelligence humaine et ses mécanismes d'apprentissages », estime Yann LeCun.

Le Deep learning fait l'objet d'importants investissements privés, notamment de la part des grands acteurs du net, mais aussi publics. « De plus en plus d'entreprises ont des masses de données gigantesques à exploiter, trier, indexer, et cela demande des ressources considérables. L'intelligence artificielle et le Deep learning peuvent aider à le faire de façon automatisée et plus efficace », confirme Yann LeCun qui reste prudent quant aux fantasmes que suscitent ces développements. « De grands

Note: This list was generated based on global desktop and mobile web visits with data from SimilarWeb as of June 2023. However, for companies on the list that also have a mobile app, we added an estimate of their app "traffic" (MAUs x sessions per MAU per month), with data from Sensor Tower as of June 2023, alongside web traffic to determine their spot on the list. This list does not include app-only companies, and does not include activity happening within a Discord server. Request body

model string Required

ID of the model to use. You can use the List models API to see all of your available models, or see our Model overview for descriptions of them.

input string or array Required

Input text to embed, encoded as a string or array of tokens. To embed multiple inputs in a single request, pass an array of strings or array of token arrays. Each input must not exceed the max input tokens for the model (8191 tokens for `text-embedding-ada-002`). Example Python code for counting tokens.

user string Optional

A unique identifier representing your end-user, which can help OpenAI to monitor and detect abuse. Learn more.

But you don't often see something like this: Anthropic CEO Dario Amodei has penned an epic essay called "Machines of Loving Grace" that's fresh out on his personal blog.

This series of insights on the power of new non-deterministic AI is unlike most of what's out there, and to set the stage, Amodei explains a number of reasons why he's not just cheerleading for new innovations and initiatives, but bringing a bit of a different, more nuanced perspective.

He talks about the ubiquity of propaganda, the tendency of experts and people on the front lines to be grandiose about potential results, and our human tendency to apply "science fiction" ideas to AI's vague and generalized potential.

On the other hand, Amodei makes it clear that he does believe in quite a bit of benefit arising out of what we're exploring now. In a definition of what he calls "powerful AI," he talks about systems that are smarter than a Nobel prize winner, set up with modern, capable interfaces, and able to do autonomous tasks, a phenomenon he calls a "country
